

New board member appointed to lake conservation district

Paul Steinhauser has been appointed to the White Bear Lake Conservation District board of directors by the city of Birchwood. Steinhauser replaces Jane Harper, who resigned earlier this summer.

A Birchwood resident for nine years, Steinhauser has lived in the White Bear Lake area 40 years. He co-owns a small company that builds energy-efficient, small environmental footprint housing. Steinhauser is director and founder of Race2Reduce and co-authored the city of White Bear Lake residential water use study in 2016. In a former career, he served as general partner for 20 years at White Bear Racquet & Swim, where he instituted multiple environmental initiatives that saved water, energy and money. In addition, Steinhauser was sustainability director for Life Time Fitness corporate from 2007 to 2011, which included process improvements that reduced water use.
